Both Russia And Japan Await Definite News Most Eagerly---Many Vessels Have Seen Both Fleets On The Move.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Penang, Straits Settlement, April 26.—It is expected the third Baltic squadron under Admiral Nebogatoff will pass here today. The authorities are keeping a close watch for the fleet, patrolling the approaches to the harbor at night.

Hongkong, April 26.—The three battleships and two cruisers seen this morning by the Calchas proved to be part of the British Asiatic squadron.

London, April 26.—The Tokyo correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says that during the latter stage of the neutrality crisis Great Britain intimated her intention of supporting Japan. Two British warships left Hongkong on April 19 at full speed for Kamranh bay. It is expected that Rear Admiral Nebogatoff will ship supplies in Dutch waters.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Telegraph reports that the difficulties between France and Japan occasioned by Rojostevsky's stay at Kamranh bay are not yet settled. He adds that serious complications seem likely to mark the closing phase of the campaign.

Guess at Movements.
All the reports concerning the movements of Admiral Rojostevsky, Rear Admiral Nebogatoff and Admiral Togo are merely guesswork. It is reported from Tokyo that Rojostevsky has gone to Tonkin bay—again a French harbor.

There are no reliable reports to indicate the whereabouts of Nebogatoff. A telegram from Tsinlau states that he has not yet joined Rojostevsky, but it does not seem likely that this correspondent is any better informed than the one who sends a St. Petersburg rumor that they have already met.

Japan Buying Steamers.
It is said in shipping circles in London that Japan has purchased a large number of steamships in England for her largely increasing coasting trade with Formosa, China and Port Arthur.

Russian agents in London are making determined efforts to secure colliers for Vice Admiral Rojostevsky's fleet, it is reported in the same quarters, but the reluctance of owners to accept charters owing to the enormous risk, compels the Russian agents to purchase vessels outright.

The urgent need for these colliers is said to be due to the fact that Vice Admiral Rojostevsky has not sufficient coal to carry him to Vladivostok.

STENOGRAPHER MAY HELP PROSECUTION

Said To Have Made Revelations Concerning Certain Deals of Beef Packers.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Chicago, April 26.—Subpoenas were issued today for the department managers of three Kansas City packing-houses to appear before the federal grand jury to testify concerning the revelations said to have been made by Mrs. Marie Marcey, a former stenographer for both the Armour and Swift concerns. Twenty witnesses still remain to be heard. The investigation will be set aside temporarily in order to enable the jury to finish other business. According to the prosecution the five witnesses that were examined this morning furnished proof of certain combines of packers with so-called "casing companies."

WOMEN'S CLUBS STEP TO A UNIVERSAL SUFFRAGE VOTE

Susan B. Anthony Replies To Comment By
Cleveland, In A Terse, Bitter
Address.

Rochester, N. Y., April 26.—Susan B. Anthony has taken up the gauntlet thrown down by Grover Cleveland on the subject of woman's clubs. In a statement here she said the article which appeared recently in the Ladies' Home Journal was not at all like Mr. Cleveland's; that charity clubs naturally lead to the ballot as the only way to settle the problems confronting the club; that Mr. Cleveland's movement will scarcely make a ripple on the broad surface on which the woman suffrage ship is sailing. Miss Anthony said:

Not Like Cleveland.
"The article does not sound like Mr. Cleveland, and I am inclined to the belief that somebody else wrote it and had him sign it to make some money. Mr. Cleveland said that religious, charitable and benevolent organizations of women are all right, and that literary clubs and those attempting to get the ballot for women are all wrong."

"The fact is, when women join charitable and benevolent organizations they soon find they can do nothing without the ballot. The reason is, in a large majority of cases the objects of charity are the results of drink, gambling, or visiting brothels. The women cannot help these men unless they can close the saloons, gambling places, and brothels."

Why Women Seek Ballot.
"For that reason the women want to vote. So when Mr. Cleveland admits that women may safely join charitable, religious and benevolent organizations he brings in the ballot, which alone can aid these clubs."

"I know that Mr. Bok of the Ladies' Home Journal is an opponent of women's suffrage, and I expect he is trying to get interviews in opposition to the movement. I will say that they pay about as much as they please, women's suffrage will come. We now have twenty-four states where women vote on school questions, three or four where they vote on questions of taxation, one state where they vote at municipal elections, and four states where women have the full vote. When a movement has gone that far it is not going to stop."

"However, this little movement against us, headed by Mr. Cleveland, because he now has to take the lead, will scarcely make a ripple. We will hold our next national convention at Portland, where they have the referendum. If they can get a petition signed by $800 the secretary of state or governor must submit the question to the people."

La Crosse, April 26.—In a fit of melancholy this morning, Mrs. Frank Powell, the wife of the city engineer and one of the most beautiful women in this city, blew her brains out with a revolver.

STATE NOTES

The grand council of the Royal Arcanum will be held in Madison today. A young child of Herman Behling of Menomonie was choked to death by a peanut shell.

E. P. Lowry and G. A. Trever of Wisconsin have passed the examination for entrance to the Naval academy.

The farmhouse of Charles Berweg, living near Ashland, was burned yesterday and his year-old child was cremated.

An uncle of Brian Mason of Neenah died last week at Bradford, England, and bequeathed the family an estate valued at $50,000.

Eddie Graham of Osceola, 5-year-old, received probably fatal injuries while in the field with his father, being run over by a drag.

Mr. and Mrs. P. H. Gunnison, pioneers of Sauk county, celebrated their fiftieth wedding anniversary at North Freedom on Tuesday.

William Pagel received probably fatal injuries at the Neenah Paper company's mill by falling between two colanders and sustaining a crushed abdomen.

Through mistaking smallpox for chicken pox and permitting neighbors to visit the patients, there has been a wholesale exposure to the disease in Neenah.

Sadie Karsten of La Crosse, 7 years old, was fatally burned while playing with a bonfire and her mother received serious injuries in a brave attempt to save the child.

Cure for Insomnia.
One who suffered from insomnia recommends bandaging the eyes with a handkerchief when preparing to rest for the night. The explanation of the cure is that the bandage induces sleep by driving the blood from the eyes and relieving the strain of trying to see in the dark.

Olive Oil for Nervousness.
Sufferers from nerve disorders should certainly try olive oil cure, which is most highly recommended to those who have learned abroad to appreciate the addition of oil to salads. The very best and purest olive oil must be obtained, and one teaspoonful three times a day is the dose. It is the victim of neurasthenia, anemia or disordered nerves is in a hurry to be cured.—London Mail.

What a Woman Misunderstands.
It's hard for a woman to make herself believe that the man who pays all his house bills promptly and can't do any more is as good a husband as the one who doesn't, but who brings his wife home a bunch of flowers every Saturday night.—New York Press.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Milwaukee, April 26.—The excitement incident to the announcement of the Bigelow defalcation has entirely subsided. None of the depositors of the First National bank gathered at the bank this morning to demand their money. Interest now centers on the capture of Assistant Cashier Goll, who is still missing. The police in all the important cities have been notified to look out for him.

Have Been Brought to Light by the Police Just at Present—
More Mystery.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
Chicago, April 26.—The police today received a letter from Carl Loeffler at Durbach, Germany, saying he recognized the picture of Johann Hoch as a man who married the writer's niece, Justine Loeffler, in Chicago in 1856. The woman died mysteriously in New York. He thinks Hoch might have murdered her.

Bookmark Easy to Make.
For an easy to make bookmark take a square envelope of rather heavy, pretty paper. Clip off the corners and you have four little caps, any one ready to slip over the corner of a page to mark a stopping place. They can be painted with little flower designs if wanted or the edges touched off irregularly with gold or silver paint.

Completed the Cheer.
A day or two ago there appeared on the register of the Coates house the names of Charles Hipp and Mrs. Hipp of Chicago. A traveling man, who was the next arrival, picked up a pen and, hesitating a moment, said to the clerk, "I guess I'll change my name to-day." Then under the names of the Chicago guests he wrote, "John T. Hooley."—Kansas City Times.

MOODY DECIDES REBATES LEGAL

Special Contracts With Railroads Are All Right Under Certain Conditions.

ARE STRICTLY ACCORDING TO LAW

Holds That The United States Statutes Are Entitled To Accept Lower Rates On Material Used
If Desired.

Washington, April 26.—The United States government is free to accept all the rebates it can get from the railroads. So Attorney General Moody decided in connection with the contracts, which Sec'y Hitchcock made with a number of railroads for the transportation of railroads for the construction of enormous irrigation dams for the reclamation of arid lands.

In so decided the attorney general overturned the opinion of Comptroller of the Treasury Tracewell, who gave it as his personal opinion that the contracts were in violation of the spirit, if not the letter, of the interstate commerce law.

The statute says that federal, state and municipal governments are to be expected from the operations of the law. The attorney general held that the contracts which provided for rebates on material to be furnished to the government were within the meaning of the exception, inasmuch as the whole benefit of the rebates was to accrue to the government.

Government Not a Competitor.

The idea of the lawmakers when they made that exception in favor of governments was that they would not be engaged in trade that competed with private persons or corporations, and therefore no one would be damaged by the granting of concessions to them. The idea upon which the interstate commerce law is founded is that it is the business of the government to see to it that rivals in business receive like treatment at the hands of carriers chartered by the government and given the right of eminent domain to condemn private property for public uses.

The attorney general's opinion indicates that if the government were in competition with a manufacturer in any matter he would hold that the taking of a rebate by the government would constitute a violation of the law, because such rebate would then give one shipper an unjust and discriminatory advantage over another.

Difference Is Defined.

The presumption is, whenever the government asks for and receives a rebate that the government intends the benefit to accrue to the government in the discharge of ordinary governmental functions. In other words, Kansas, when it begins making refined oil in competition with the Standard, will have no right to ask for or receive a rebate from any common carrier, although it would be all right for it to ask and accept rebates on material it might have bought for the construction of a road or a bridge.

The opinion is a source of great joy to Secretary Hitchcock. He did not like the opinion expressed by Comptroller Tracewell. He took that opinion as a personal reflection upon himself.

FAILS TO IDENTIFY THE MEN AND WOMEN

Pawnbroker in Nan Patterson Case

The Revolver.

[SPECIAL BY SCRIPTS-M'RAE.]
New York, April 26.—Hyman Stern, a pawnbroker, from whom it is alleged by the prosecution, J. Morgan Smith purchased the revolver with which Young was killed, failed to identify Smith in court this morning, in the Nan Patterson trial. He also failed to identify Mrs. Smith as the woman who was with the man when the revolver was purchased.

Last of the Maine Pines.

Not all of the old growth pines have disappeared from the Pine Tree State, but the survivors are disappearing. Several of them went in North Waterford the other day, when Elton York cut three immense pines in the pasture and hauled them to the mill to be made into box boards. The largest was four feet in diameter and showed 150 annual rings. So passes the glory of the forest to be made into soap boxes.—Norway (Me.) Advertiser.

A Street Scene.

The teamster was not beating his horses, but he was using pretty vigorous language. "This cruelty to animals," declared the woman with three birds on her hat, "is dreadful." And she vented her indignation by giving a street urchin that jostled her a crack that sent him on his way whimpering.—Houston Post.

"Watch as Well as Pray."

Such is the tenor of a note left behind by some audacious burglars a house in Ramsey entered during the absence at church of the tenant, a spinster lady. The burglars ransacked the house, taking all the money they could find, but not before quietly partaking of supper. The spread a white cloth over a table emptied the larder, and, having enjoyed a good feed, decamped undisturbed.—Liverpool (Eng.) Mercury.

New and Profitable Occupation.

Good Spirit in a Hospital.

Most of us are ill, and some of us are dying. We are all fighting for our lives inch by inch. But we contrive to crowd more fun into our days than we ever did when we were well; and our conflict with a baffling disease lends dignity to commonplace and trivial things. High spirits rule here.—Rev. C. F. Aked (Davos Platz).

ASSEMBLY RECALLS THAYER MEASURE

Bill Sent to the Senate, Brought Back by Close Vote After Long Parliamentary Fight.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, April 26.—Another long parliamentary fight in the assembly today resulted in a recall of the Thayer residence option bill from the senate by a vote of 38 to 36. The significant changes in the vote of Tuesday, by which the bill was then passed, were the turning of Assemblyman Curtis of Racine against the measure and the arrival of Assemblyman Aldridge, who was absent Thursday. These two gave the brewers an advantage. It was attempted to reconsider and kill the bill at once, but Assemblyman Thayer gave notice that he would insist upon speaking for his measure and would insist upon all necessary measures being present and voting if necessary, making a call of the house. This blocked matters and it was finally decided to take a recess until evening to finally settle the controversy.

Madison, Wis., April 26.—Assemblyman Cleary of Juneau county, author of the freak bachelors' tax bill which was killed by his fellow members and others over his forthcoming engagement announcement. It is common report at the legislature that he is to be married. Such a statement was used in the debate on his bill by Assemblyman LeRoy and others who opposed the measure, saying that he was soon to become a married man and out of the reach of his proposed law, and this statement, several times repeated, was allowed by the gentleman from Juneau to go uncontradicted and undenied. The trouble arises out of the fact that his fellow members insist that he is engaged to a young woman from Juneau who is now an operator in a Madison telephone exchange. He has been many times seen with her at theatres and other places and although her friends have confided to others the fact that they are engaged, the bachelor enemy of bachelors resents the repeated attempts of members to congratulate him. Mr. Cleary said last night that he was greatly afraid that if the sport continued his "Irish blood would be likely to boil" and he would make trouble. On one such occasion in the senate chamber yesterday, during the Eaton trial a case of assault and battery nearly developed. Doubtless after the members learn that the mention of the alleged engagement is distasteful to Mr. Cleary they will cease to annoy him.

More Buildings For Poor.

To the sum of $2,000,000 left by Mr. Peabody between 1862 and 1873, out of which the Peabody buildings for the poor were erected in London, there has since been added $4,793,255, received for rent and interest, making the total fund, according to a report just issued, $7,293,255. As more money comes in, more buildings are erected.

Your "winter of discontent" may come in the middle of the calendar summer—unless your advertising campaign provides for "doing business" in all kinds of weather and all seasons.

THE BEST JUDGE.

The best judge of dry goods is the man who has devoted his life to this particular branch of business.

The best grocer is the man who started out as a boy with a broom and swept his way to the front.

The best authority on law is the man who mastered Blackstone when a boy, and who has gone on through the years of mature manhood, keeping pace with new statutes.

The man who devotes his life and energies to any particular calling, is usually considered an encyclopedia of knowledge along that particular line.

This is just as true of railroads and large transportation companies, as of any other line of business.

They are managed by men who have devoted their lives, not to the origins, but to actual work on the great problems of a great industry.

Marvin Hewitt, president of the Northwestern railway company, commenced his career as a telegraph operator in 1851. Promotion followed the recognition of ability until he landed at the front, and for years he has occupied the responsible position which he now enjoys.

It is idle to claim that this class of men are not better qualified to judge on the justice and equity of railroad questions, than any other class, and yet there is a disposition in these days of theoretical reform, to set these men aside, and turn the responsibility over to legislators and leaders, who lack experience, and who are in every way incompetent to handle the question intelligently.

Wisconsin, much to the disgrace of the conservative old state, is lending the van in this movement. Under the inspiration and direction of an erratic and theoretical governor, who assumes to know more about railroads than the men who build them, or handle them successfully.

The governor recently contributed to the Saturday Evening Post, a lengthy article on what he facetiously

terms "Fair Railroad Legislation."

It is a plausible article intended to appeal to the prejudice of the masses, and from a political standpoint is strong and effective, but it is so full of mis-statements and false conclusions that the railroads could not afford to let it pass unchallenged, and so in the last issue of the Post,

under the title of "Unfair Railroad Legislation," Walker D. Hines, late

First Vice-President of the Louisville and Nashville road replied.

The article is too long to reproduce, but it should be read by every legislator as well as by every tax-ernmental dispensation of commerce and prosperity should be restricted merely to the matter of rates and the strictly traffic side of the railroad operations. He thinks railroad commissions should also have the power to prescribe proper station accommodations, adequate train service, and reasonable connections with other lines, and, in all important matters, the power to prescribe adequate and efficient service and facilities—"always taking into consideration the circumstances and conditions with respect to the towns, cities and sections of the State concerned." Thus, he thinks, the physical, as well as the traffic side of railroad operations must be put in charge of a government bureau. In other words, he frankly goes the whole length, and the logical effects of his position is that Government initiative must be substituted for private initiative in all matters pertaining to railroads, just so far as this Government bureau may choose to take such power of initiative away from the railroads.

Nor must the interest of the investors in railroad securities be overlooked. Governor La Follette's articles show convincingly a purpose to work a radical reduction in railroad income, which must largely reduce the returns now received by the holders of railroad stocks and bonds. No other meaning and effect can be attached to his confident assertion that rates must be greatly reduced because railroad costs of operation have been greatly reduced, and to his vigorous denunciation of the existing standard of railroad rates. He declares that it is the duty of railroad commissioners to "reduce the rate as much as possible," and still leave it high enough to stand the test of judicial review unless they are actually confiscatory in character or constitute a palpably unreasonable abuse of the Commission's discretion. Therefore, any railroad commission has a wide margin of discretion within which it can safely reduce rates without fear of judicial interference, and Governor La Follette, in effect, exhorts all railroad commissions to reduce rates just as far as they can within this margin of discretion. It must always be remembered that, although corporations may hold the legal title to railroads, yet, in the last analysis, it is individuals who own railroad securities and who have furnished the capital with which railroad have been built and improved. Many such individuals are very wealthy, but greatly larger numbers are only in moderate circumstances, and the vast body of frugal people who have invested their surplus earnings in insurance or savings banks must rely for the security of their investments, to a very large extent, upon the institutions to which they have confided their savings. An attack, therefore, upon railroad securities is an attack not merely upon corporations, but ultimately upon the great number of citizens whose savings are directly or indirectly invested in railroad securities. If Governor La Follette's attitude is fairly typical in this movement, no one can doubt that the movement is, in fact, a direct attack upon the value of railroad securities.

TOO BAD.

It happened late Saturday afternoon, just after the rush on the bargain counters.

It was a most pleasing incident to all the men in the car and most disconcerting to one woman.

She was large, extremely so. She carried more bundles than the average shopper. She found every seat in the car taken. A middle-aged man of benign countenance politely lifted his hat as he rose to give her his seat.

She plumped herself down in it, and, without a word of thanks, began straightening out the wrinkles in her dress, never deigning to look at the man who had given up his seat.

It did not seem to bother the man. He was engrossed in looking for something in his overcoat pocket.

He fumbled about, evidently unable to find what he sought.

"Pardon me, madam," he said, leaning toward the large, fleshy woman. "I believe you sat down on my gloves."

She arose partly. Not seeing them she got up to see if they had vanished under the folds of her gown.

As she stepped aside, the gentleman dropped into the seat he had vacated but a moment before.

"Perhaps, madam," he said, as he unfolded his paper and prepared to read, "the next time you are offered a seat in a crowded car, you will appreciate it sufficiently to say 'thank you.'"

She left the car at the next corner without answering.

Perhaps there are two sides to the car hog story.—Milwaukee Journal.

The Chicago & Alton railway company has issued a prohibitive order to all employees. The company proposes to have none but sober men in its employ. This is practical temperance work, deprived of sentiment or hysterical emotion. It is simply business, and all corporations would be benefited by adopting the same policy.

A college student was killed in a railroad wreck near Bloomington, Illinois. The company was sued for $10,000, but the judge decided that the young man was an expense to his family, and as no one was dependent upon him, there was no cause for action.

The Teamster's strike in Chicago ended in failure, as all sympathetic strikes should end. The men had grievance, and public sentiment condemned their action. When the right of every man to work is more generally recognized, labor disturbances will be a thing of the past.

The downfall of a man like president Bigelow of the First National Bank, Milwaukee, is most deplorable. More than the loss of money is the loss of confidence, because the latter represents the world's great capital.

The legislature should take a day off and read Mr. Hines' article on "Unfair Railroad Legislation" in the last issue of the Saturday Evening Post. There are some questions that will bear thinking about the second time.

There is no occasion for alarm over the little flurry in Milwaukee bank circles. The loss occasioned by the defection of the president of the First National, has been made good by the directors. The institution is financially strong and depositors are fully protected.

If this sentiment, in regard to tainted money goes on, Rockefeller will find it difficult to get rid of his money, unless the Chicago University continues to stand pat.

The man who goes into a combine to paralyze his business by not advertising, ought to take down his sign and retire from the field.

States supreme court has delivered a knockout blow to the labor unions. The court, in the case of a New York law which limited the working day of employees in bakeries and confectionery shops, to ten hours, has decided that no state has the right to place an arbitrary limit on the working day of those engaged in healthful occupations. This is equivalent to declaring unconstitutional in advance the eight-hour labor law which the labor unions have been beseeching congress to act.

Eau Claire Leader: The Milwaukee Journal does not believe Governor La Follette will decline the senatorship and appoint Uncle Ike Stephenson to the place, because the Governor stated to the legislature just after his election: "For these reasons, then, I say, in accepting your high commission, that, if there should appear any conflict in the obligation I entered into when I took the oath of office as Governor, and that of United States senator-elect, then I shall ask you to receive it from me and place it in other hands OF YOUR OWN CHOOSING. The selection of United States senator IS YOUR PEROGATIVE AND WILL, OF COURSE, BE PRESERVED TO YOU."

Chicago Tribune: It is the impression that it was no speculative mania of the bank president which led him into crime, but his confidence in the smartness of his son as a speculator. The son is said to have gone into the wheat deal and to have got aid from the father. It is easy to see how the latter, having taken the first false step and become entangled, would not stop short, but went ahead in a blind hope of getting through safely. This is a melancholy conclusion of an honorable career. It does not matter in the eyes of the law what the motives were which led Mr. Bigelow astray. He has been guilty of grave offenses, and perhaps is resigned to pay penalty. It must be some relief to him that the torturing suspense of the last few weeks or months is over, even though he knows what awaits him. This is the first sad sequel of the collapsed wheat deal. It is to be hoped no more will follow.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

This Pig Went to Market

You have heard many stories about pigs and probably a story about this pig. For this is the one that went to market.

He was a funny little fellow, who was fond of fun, and because he liked to have a good time he got into trouble.

At the market he got his baskets filled with apples and potatoes and peaches and pears and berries and other good things that his mother had told him to get and then started for home.

He had not gone very far when he met two other little pigs. One of them was flying a kite and the other was watching him.

"Oh, what great sport!" exclaimed our little pig. "How I should like to try that kite!"

Then the other pigs said he could do so, and he set his baskets down and took hold of the cord upon which the kite, away up in the air, was pulling as hard as ever it could pull.

"This is great fun," said he. "Hold tight!" cried the other pigs.

"I will," said our pig.

After awhile he became tired, and he called the other pigs to come and take their kite, but they did not come.

What do you suppose had happened?

Those two naughty little pigs had run away with his baskets.

When he got home there were tears in his eyes and his mother had a little switch waiting for him. You may be sure that the next time she sent him on an errand he did not stop on the way to fly kites or anything else. There is a time for play and a time for work.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

Truths that Strike Home

Your grocer is honest and—if he cares to do so—can tell you that he knows very little about the bulk coffee he sells you. How can he know, where it originally came from, how it was blended—or with what—or when roasted? If you buy your coffee loose by the pound, how can you expect purity and uniform quality?

LION COFFEE, the LEADER OF ALL PACKAGE COFFEES, is of necessity uniform in quality, strength and flavor. For OVER A QUARTER OF A CENTURY, LION COFFEE has been the standard coffee in millions of homes.

LION COFFEE is carefully packed at our factories, and until opened in your home, has no chance of being adulterated, or of coming in contact with dust, dirt, germs, or unclean hands.

In each package of LION COFFEE you get one full pound of Pure Coffee. Insist upon getting the genuine. (Lion head on every package.)

PRETTY WEDDING AT SIX O'CLOCK TONIGHT

Miss Edna Spoon and Oscar Bucklin To Be United in Marriage This Evening.

At the residence of J. F. Spoon, 167 Washington street, this evening at six o'clock Miss Edna M. Spoon and Mr. Oscar W. Bucklin are to be married. The ceremony will be performed by Rev. R. C. Denison and the contracting parties will be unattended. Miss Spoon is a very popular young lady of this city and the groom is a young man well known here and is employed in the offices of the Northern Grain company in Minneapolis. An elaborate supper will be served after the ceremony and the happy couple will go immediately to Minneapolis, where they will reside. About seventy guests are expected to be present and among them will be Miss Bessie Cooper of Fond du Lac and Miss Minnie Pierce of Beloit. Music will be furnished by Messrs. Hatch and Gray with harp and violin. The room in which the wedding will be solemnized is decorated with palms, ferns and Easter lilies. The parlor and library are beautified with red and pink carnations and ferns and the dining-room is decked with white roses and smilax.

EXAMINATIONS ARE NEAR AT HAND NOW

Chicago Teacher Tells of Curious Devices To Be Certain of Knowledge.

"Examination time is not far off," says a Chicago school-teacher. "I suppose a number of my boys are already beginning to evolve new ideas in their heads."

"I have taught boys and girls for seven years. I have never yet seen a boy who wouldn't cheat in an examination if he got a chance. I have never yet seen a girl who wouldn't cheat under any circumstances. They say that women are more deceitful than men. It can't be true."

"I have a collection of captured crabs of considerable ingenuity. One crab is a book, circular in form, of the size to fit in a watch case. There are thirty finely written pages to the book. It contains all the more difficult propositions in plain geometry. The creator of this crab had it in his watch and had been consulting it without detection for two hours, when, unluckily, someone joggled his arm and the crab fell to the floor."

"I have a yellow lead pencil with the kings of England and the dates and results of all the important battles of English history written on it."

"I have a penknife and an eraser that are hieroglyphed well. They contain the irregular French verbs."

"Once, in a geography examination, I saw a boy looking at his shoe a good deal. I found that he had written on his shoe the capitals of the principal countries of the world."

"Few boys use their cuffs for cuffs. Black writing on white linen is too easily seen, too dangerous. The cuff as a crab is obsolete."

"The nails of the left hand, in the case of boys who can write finely enough, will often contain a great number of Latin rules, Greek verbs, dates and such like valuable information. The nails make one of the best and safest crabs known to schoolmasters."

"I never punish boys who cheat. Some of the nicest boys I know have been caught cheating. To cheat in examinations is, perhaps, boy nature."

"A wolf in a cage if the door is left open will escape. A prisoner in a prison if his cell is left unlocked will run away. A boy in an examination, unless he is watched cautiously, will cheat. Maybe he is no more to blame than the wolf or the convict."

CHURCH FOUNDED FIFTY YEARS AGO

Presbyterians Will Celebrate Anniversary—Rev. Pence Will Speak.

Fifty years ago the first Presbyterian church of Janesville was founded and the anniversary of the event will be celebrated Friday, Saturday and Sunday, May 3, 4 and 5. The program will open Friday evening and at that time Rev. E. H. Pence, formerly pastor here and now presiding over the Detroit church, will deliver the anniversary address. John G. Rexford will read a historical paper on the institution of this city. Saturday from two o'clock in the afternoon until eight in the evening a reception and banquet will be held. Historical sketches of the different church societies and forms of work will be given, greetings from absent members will be read and reminiscences related by ex-pastors in attendance.

THE BRAVE WOODCHUCK.

Stood His Ground Against a Dog and Put the Intruder to Flight.

It is unusual to see a woodchuck drive a dog; it is usually reversed and the chuk takes to his hole, to be dug out by the dog, says the Bangor (Me.) News.
A Phillips came following his mistress, who was on a drive through the back towns of Phillips the other day, and after driving off all the hens from the farms along the road, he came upon a woodchuck near the road. He barked with joy at the sight of that strange animal, and with one leap he landed in front of the woodchuck.
Then he stopped—there was something in the woodchuck's eye that indicated that there might be serious trouble. The dog discovered it, and backed away to safety, and, strange to state, the woodchuck followed him; followed him until the poetry was all out of the experience and the fun was all gone. Finally, the dog acknowledged his defeat by dropping his tail and starting for Phillips at a very fast pace.

LUNAR SURFACE CHANGES.

Signs Which Lead Scientist to Believe There Is Life on the Moon.

Scientific research is all the time over-turning old and cherished ideas, and the latest example of this is found in the statement by an astronomer that the moon is not the dead world we supposed it to be, says Cassell's Journal.
He finds there are distinct changes visible on the lunar surface, due to volcanic action, to frost, and to vegetation.
What is believed to be hoar frost is seen to cover a portion of the surface of the moon when the lunar day begins, and thereafter to dwindle away just as hoar frost would do on our earth.
Dark patches which deepen in hue are seen on many parts of the surface, and are believed to be some form of vegetation.

KICKERS' KOLUM

To the Editor: I see by the morning paper that one concern in this city has sold 1,100 watches at prices ranging from one to eighteen dollars. In the past five months. This, of course, does not include the numerous other articles, including books, stationery, pens, pencils, razors, knives and dry-goods, which have been disposed of by the same firm, making perhaps in all a total of $25,000 worth of business in this same period. This concern referred to does not pay any taxes, simply a license which allows them to do business and costs them but fifty dollars. They are now going to close their place of business until full and at the same time the city assessors are going to begin their work and assess the value of the firms which did not sell 1,100 watches in five months. These home firms pay taxes and help support the city government. Why not make all firms doing a similar business in competition to home established houses do the same thing? This is food for reflection for the council. At least, have the city assessors begin their work before the spring moving takes place.
"A TAXPAYER."

Kick on Kicks

Editor Gazette.—I have recently noticed several items in the "Kickers' Kolum," relative to riding bicycles on the side walks, and it is evident that the writer is prejudiced or ignorant of the actual state of affairs in this, as well as other cities.
I for one, have never witnessed the excessive use of the side walks, by wheelmen, when the streets were passable, saying nothing of their being preposterous.
If you would have wheels kept off of the side walks, clean up the streets and keep careless or malicious persons from throwing broken bottles and window glass in the bicycle paths, and in fine do not try to compel others to ride through the mud and slush, a thing which you would absolutely refuse to do yourself.

If a little of the golden rule, tempered with common sense were used, there would be but little cause for any complaint.
"AN OBSERVER."

Kickers Kolum

Kick Kol. Ed.—Citem out girls. The fellows in this town who haven't already entered into the matrimonial ring are worth worrying over a little bit. All the prize packs were lifted long ago and there's only shop worn mules in the grab bag. Don't give them no occasion for parting. Quit inviting them. When you want men's company send to Rockford or go there yourself. The rising generation may have a little more gumption than the unappreciated remnants that pretend to do society hereabouts nowadays. Maybe they'll get up a dance or picnic of their own initiative once in a while. That's neither here nor there. It's the present flour of our shiverly that needs the ice passed to him individually, and collective and needs it bad.

"BRONCHO PETE."

Likes the Helms.
For the Kickers' Kolum.—Why is it the cops holler about having to wear white helmets? Are they proud or don't they think that style of head decoration will be comfortable? If they are policemen and regularly and amply paid they should do all they can for the people. The white helmets are for the people. When they wear the snowy domes no one can again spring the old gag of invisible blue in Janesville. The argument, that criminals can more easily escape when they see a policeman, leaks. A crack can spot a copper in civilians dress, while a person who needs the protection cannot tell a blue coated policeman in many instances from a railway employee. Let's have the white helmets.
"NOT A POLICEMAN."

Wants Better Walks

To the Editor:—I would suggest to whoever discharges the duties of sidewalk commissioner in the city, that he walk down south River St. as far as the water works pumping station some time, preferably after a good rain. He will find two blocks of clay walk that will spoil the appearance of his shoes and injure them, and muddy places that will endanger his life unless he can walk in slippery places without falling. He will also discover a number of board walks in about as poor condition as they could be.
"A PERIPATETIC."

Kick Is Endorsed

Editors Gazette.—The purpose of this missive is to endorse "Pedestrian's" kick of last week about the waste paper boxes on the bridge. If the man who gave the permission to place these big hindrances on the sidewalk would try to do some Saturday shopping or buy their groceries and meat for Sunday, some Saturday evening, they would probably consider their decision.
"PEDESTRIAN NO. 2."

To the Editor: Why not have a fourth of July celebration this year and begin planning early enough so as to make it a success? What was the fourth last year, two circuses and the "Pike" Janesville was well-advertised and this year's celebration should be a "coriker."
"CELEBRATE."

To the Editor: Would it not be fair for the city to pay the Imperial band a yearly sum of two hundred dollars to keep their organization alive? By this, I mean pay them the two hundred each year with the provision that they furnish free music at the fourth of July and Decoration-day celebrations.
"A BAND-LOVER."

Life's Stepping Stones.

You think that an opportunity must necessarily be something great and unusual; but the fact is, the stepping-stone to the place above you is in the very thing you are doing. In the way you do it; it does not matter what it is.—Success Magazine.

BUILDING NOTES

Bids are now being made on the residence of Dr. Michaelis to be built in the third ward. The plans were drawn by architect Hilron, and call for a modern frame dwelling with concrete foundation.

Contractor Denning is building a dwelling on Pleasant street, a block east of the Grant school building, for John Welch. The structure will be a modern two story frame house, the two two-story portions, measuring 12x14 and 14x24 and the one-story part 16x16. Its cost is about $1900.

The site for the new Methodist church at the corner of Pleasant St. and Franklin is being cleared of buildings and work on the new edifice will be commenced probably by the first of June. The plans having been decided upon, contractors are figuring on it and submitting bids and the award will be made May 2. Local builders, it is thought, have bid quite numerously upon the job, and many foreign bids will undoubtedly be made. The frame house which stands on the corner has been moved to south River street and is being placed near the river bank at the end of Holmes street. The old Dearborn tobacco warehouse was purchased by contractor Denning and is now being moved to 209 Cherry street. Mr. Denning plans to remodel it completely into a double house. The structure is 30x40 and addition will be placed on the rear with dimensions of 12x28 and a large porch will be built on the front. It will be fitted up with all the modern improvements and equipment.

Fréd Beilharz is anticipating the erection of a new residence at 180 South Jackson street and the plans for it are now being completed in the office of Architect, Lorin L. Hilton. The building will be two stories high and 30x37. It is to be constructed of solid cement blocks, the product of the Janesville Cement Brick Company's plant, from ground to cornice. It will be a beautiful dwelling and among the features will be cement porches, the floors being of cement and round pillars made entirely of the same substance. These pillars will be among the first circular cement pillars used and will be fourteen inches in diameter. The cost of the house, will be between $4,000 to $5,000.

An Animal Story For Little Folks

What Is Style?

Mr. Goose and Mr. Green Bull Frog chanced to inhabit a pond quite near a fashionable hotel in the country. Their little pond was not much larger than they needed for their comfort, but on the booklet advertising the hotel it was called "the lake."

Every evening the ladies and gentlemen from the hotel would put on their fine clothes and walk around the pond and say:

"Oh, look at the swan!"
"Oh, see the fine frog!"
Both Mr. Goose and Mr. Green Bull Frog were much pleased at being so recognized and determined to have some style in dress at the pond since they saw so much of it at the hotel. Each was to dress as best became him, and then together they were to decide on the style for the pond people. When each had put on his admiral's clothes he hardly knew the other.

"THIS IS THE PROPER THING."

Mr. Goose was rigged out in coat and vest with a tall six story pleadably collar and high hat. Mr. Frog was dressed simply in a low standing collar and sporty derby.

"This is the proper thing," said Mr. Frog, "All the sports wear it."
"Imagine what a sight I'd be in that little hat band," said the goose disgustedly. "This cock of mine needs a high board fence about it. And as for that hat—I should be lost to view."

"Think what a figure I'd cut in that collar of yours," grumbled the frog. "It might do for a crown, and those clothes—oh, awful! I tell you mine is the style!"
"No, mine is, for yours wouldn't stay on me one moment."

At length the discussion waxed so warm, that they came to blows, and the goose, all but swallowed the frog.
Then, with collars torn and clothes rent and hats smashed, they sat down on the bank, panting.

"I guess the style," said Mr. Goose sadly, smoothing down his ruffled feathers, "is to wear what suits you best."
"I guess you speak the truth," panted Mr. Frog.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

To Fill Cracks.

To fill cracks in a floor, make a paste of one pound of flour, three quarts of water, and a tablespoonful of alum; mix thoroughly and boil. Soak small pieces of newspaper in this paste until the mixture is as thick as putty, then force into the cracks with a knife, and it will harden like papier mache.

IN THE VALLEY OF THE SHADOW

Miss Ella Schenck
Miss Ella Schenck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus Schenck of the town of La Prairie, died yesterday at two o'clock at St. Luke's hospital, Racine, as the result of a surgical operation. Miss Schenck was born May 4, 1859. After a common school education she desired to become a teacher and took the course at the Whitewater Normal school. She afterwards taught in the district schools and later in the Milwaukee and Chicago public schools. Miss Schenck studied medicine in Chicago, but after three years of work had been completed she was obliged to give up her life's ambition on account of failing health. Miss Schenck was a member of the First Presbyterian church in Milwaukee, where she resided several years as a teacher. She was a woman of great strength of character, a staunch and one whose heart and hand were ever ready to do the kindly and helpful deed or speak the encouraging word. She was also an accomplished Bible student. Her very sudden and unexpected taking away will leave its influence on many lives which had felt her influence in school-room, church and home circle. She is survived by a father, mother and a brother, Ralph G. Schenck. She was also a niece of Mrs. Oscar F. Nowlan of this city, in whose home she was often a guest and where her loss will be keenly felt. The funeral services will be held from the family homestead in the town of La Prairie Friday afternoon at two o'clock.

Mrs. Alpa Clarissa Loudon

All that is mortal of the late Mrs. Alpa Clarissa Loudon was tenderly laid at rest in Oak Hill cemetery this afternoon. The remains arrived here from Fond du Lac this noon and funeral services were held at half-past two from the chapel at Oak Hill, Rev. H. C. Boissier officiating. Mrs. Fannie Clark and Miss Clara Anderson sang at the services and the pallbearers were: Mayhew Loudon, James Loudon, William T. Sherer and Charles Murphy.

Mrs. Benjamin Fossum

Mrs. Benjamin Fossum, who was brought to the Palmer hospital last week to undergo an operation, is dead. Mrs. Fossum was well known and much respected in Plymouth, the township in which she lived. The funeral services were held today from the Luther Valley church.

William Hart

The funeral of the late William Hart will be held tomorrow morning at 9:15 o'clock from St. Patrick's church. Burial will be in Mount Olivet cemetery.

Women's Trousers at Hyderabad.

The first time it was introduced into the haven of one of the nobles of Hyderabad, in the Deccan, I was surprised to find the Begum and her ladies dressed in tight-fitting trousers made of rich damask silks. It being the fashion to have these trousers as close-fitting as possible, they are actually sewn on, and are taken off and changed about once a fortnight.—London Daily Mail.

Autograph Quilt.

Displayed at a sale of work at a Nonconformist church in London recently was a gorgeous quilt, bearing the autographs of over 400 persons, mainly members of the congregation. The signatures, originally made in pencil on diamond-shaped pieces of blue and white drill, were feather-stitched in colored cotton by the women of the church who, on finishing the quilt, presented it to their pastor.

A HEALTHY FAMILY

Is the one that can rightfully boast of pure blood. When the rich, red wine of life is coursing through the veins it imparts vigor and strength to the body and healthy action to all parts of the system. A healthy family is a wealthy family; it may be poor in worldly goods, but possessed of a priceless jewel that all the riches of earth cannot buy. A healthy family may not carry in their veins the blood of titled nobles or distinguished ancestors, but vigorous health is always an evidence of the best and purest blood, for the vital fluid contains all material necessary for the making of bone and muscle and the growth and development of the body, and upon its purity rests our chances for good health. When the body is fed upon weak, sickly blood the system languishes, growth is stunted, disease enters without hindrance, and the simplest maladies are apt to develop into serious sickness. In so many ways does the blood become contaminated that the fewest number succeed in keeping this life-giving, health-sustaining fluid in a pure and natural state. We inherit the disease-tainted blood of ancestors, parents transmit to their children such impoverished and weak blood that their lives are a continuous battle against disease, and from earliest infancy are harassed by sores and the most dreadful skin eruptions, and heirs to some old family disease. No one has a right to throw upon the shoulders of posterity a disease that might have been cured, or allow the blood to remain impure without an effort to restore it to health. Rheumatism, Catarrh, Scrofula and many of the severer forms of skin diseases are frequently inherited, and only the most thorough constitutional treatment can remove them. Bad blood is responsible for more ill health than all other causes combined; it absorbs the poisons that gather in the system, and the germs and microbes floating in the air find their way into the circulation, and old sores and ulcers, Eczema, Boils, Malaria and a long train of other diseases follow.

If you do not come of a strong and vigorous family and your blood shows evidence of impurity, nothing will so quickly bring it back to a healthy condition as S. S. S., the most widely known and popular blood remedy on the market. It purifies and builds up weak, sluggish blood and stimulates the circulation, and thus rids the system of impurities. S. S. S. contains tonic as well as blood purifying properties, and builds up the general health, improves the appetite and digestion, and tones up the nerves while ridding the blood of all poisons and humors. Nothing reaches old chronic blood troubles like S. S. S., and being a strictly vegetable remedy can be taken by old and young without any bad after effects or injury to the system. As a blood purifier and tonic at this season S. S. S. has no superior. It puts the blood in good order, removes all poisonous accumulations, invigorates all parts of the system and prevents that debilitated, tired feeling common to this time of year. Keeping the blood healthy is the secret of all healthy families. Write us if in need of medical advice, which our physicians will furnish free of charge. Book on the blood and its diseases mailed free.

Some ten years ago I used your S. S. S. with the most satisfactory results. From childhood up I had been bothered with bad blood, characterized by skin eruptions and boils, especially bad in the summer. For five or six summers I had boils ranging from five to twenty in number each season. Our local physicians prescribed for me, but nothing they gave me did away with the annoying skin eruptions or prevented the boils from appearing. The burning accompanying the eruptions was terrible, and I had as high as six boils at one time. My condition was truly a pitiable one when I began S. S. S. It seemed to be just the medicine needed in my case. It drove out all impurities and bad blood and restored the circulation to its original strength and purity, giving me permanent relief from the skin eruptions and boils. This has been ten years ago and I have never had a return of the disease. I would state also that my husband has taken it with good results.

The Witch of Cragenstone

By ANITA CLAY MUNOZ.

Author of "In Love and Truth"

Copyright, 1905, by Anita Clay Munoz.

The soft breeze stirred the leaves of the foliage and the monotonous call of the whippoorwill could be heard over the trees of the forest, but no other sounds, such as the galloping of horses' feet, fell on the ears of the waiting, lonely woman.

"Mayhap, as thou'lt walk a little down the road behind the hill, thou'lt meet Sir Godfrey," Elisabeth called from the window.

Margaret turned to her sadly.

"Elisabeth, an Godfrey comes not to-night I shall know that he is lying helpless, ill; hath not foul play—or is dead. Tomorrow an he is not here I'll rouse the village, send messengers scurrying in all directions, for, prithee," with a little sob, "if the truth is what I suspect, I had better die of that at once than linger with this suffering, this slow suspense that is killing me."

"What foolish megrims! Nay, cheer thee, Margaret," Elisabeth cried in protest at the dark views of her mistress. "I do protest Sir Godfrey's not the man to be outdone by any villain. And who hereabout would be his enemy? He'll come anon."

"So thou hast said before," Margaret replied, turning away listlessly, "and meanest well, for thou dost love me. While yet it is day I'll stroll through the woody forest path to the village. Some new arrival at the inn perchance hath brought some news. I'll go, good Elisabeth."

At about this time Josiah Tanniston, with his broad brimmed hat pulled well down over his closely cropped hair, wearing his church going suit of black cloth and finely knit gray woolen stockings, came through the forest toward the Mayland farmhouse to make an evening call on his fair mistress. Unusual pallor shone on his stern countenance, and his eyes, cold and steely, looked almost wicked, so full were they of an expression of determination. Suddenly the sound of a light footstep fell on his ears and, raising his head, he discerned through the foliage a glimmer of blue that caused him to draw his breath hard and his heart to stand still.

Not seeing the approaching form on account of a turn in the path, Margaret advanced, her head, crowned by the wealth of hair wound high above it, held proudly, holding her long skirts well off the ground to avoid the briars in her way, disclosing as she walked the big buckles and red heels of her little black shoes.

"I give thee good even, cousin." The voice was sudden and loud.

Margaret gave a wild shriek. Her heart and soul eager for the presence of her lover, every nerve strained with listening and waiting for him, expecting him at every angle of the road, she was startled almost beyond hope of composure at this sudden voice. With her hands over her heart, panting, she fell against a tree and rested there.

"I was frightened," he said, watching her furtively out of his small gray eyes.

"What meanest thou," she cried angrily when she had recovered slightly, "that thou comest like a great panther stealing through the forest? Couldst not give a body warning?"

"Tis my fashion over to walk easily," Margaret Mayland, he observed, "but I truth I had no wish to frighten thee. Rather would I do that which would draw thee nearer to me so that thou would heed my counsel and listen to words that others far older and wiser than thou have given ear to and—"

Margaret, seeing that her cousin was inclined to be sarcastic and having no desire to remain in the forest listening to words of censure and reproach that were distasteful to her, with a quick motion stood erect before him, interrupting his harangue by saying in a quick, peremptory manner, "I have an errand in the village, Josiah, and would be on my way."

He stood in her pathway immovable. "Margaret, hear me, I do but counsel thee for thy good."

"Why should I heed thy counsel, prithee, and give ear to thee? By what right do thou admonish me? Am I not mine own mistress?" she asked disdainfully.

"It is not part of my plan to anger thee, Margaret, else I would tell thee many things with unvarnished plainness."

Suffered for Years With Dyspepsia, "Seven Barks" Cured Her.

Read this letter which Mr. E. D. Chaffin, of Ind., writes us, dated June 11, 1904: "I have used one bottle of Seven Barks and can truthfully say that it has done more good than anything I have ever taken. I suffered for years with Dyspepsia, and nothing helped me until I tried your Seven Barks."

The curative value of a medicine can be determined only by application. If troubled with Dyspepsia, you're making a big mistake if you don't try Seven Barks. No matter how many other medicines you have taken, you won't cure you—it certainly won't cure you "in the bottle," you've got to reach the seat of the disorder, there's no other way to effect a cure. Seven Barks is a simple vegetable remedy, the dose is small and it is pleasant to take. It's all it's claimed to be, or we wouldn't sell it. We make more profit on other Dyspepsia cures, but people want Seven Barks and won't take anything else. If it didn't cure, we wouldn't agree to hand back 30 cents for the "empty bottle," besides running the risk of losing a good, steady customer. We sell it with the distinct understanding: No cure, no pay.

ness for my good and for the welfare of thy soul," he said in reply. "Art thou a maid needed the firm guidance of an honorable, God-fearing man, thou'lt see, cousin," he continued sternly. "For in that wicked bedlam, the French city called Paris, thou didst learn many ways and acquire habits that if allowed to grow uncorrected would lose thee thy soul for all eternity."

Margaret, coming a step nearer, met his glance with open defiance.

"Speak plainer," she commanded. "What dost thou mean?"

"One thing, thy way of dressing. I ask thee in all reason, cousin, dost thou become a modest, virtuous maid to expose her breast and arms to the gaze of men? I do assert 'tis most unseemly."

Margaret's eyes flashed dangerously. "But," he continued, seeing her displeasure and endeavoring to control his voice so that it would sound less harsh and discordant, "I know that these are errors of education learned from the goddess in that devil's nest where thou in all innocence wast sent by thy father, and that with the firm and loving guidance of a pious husband, combined with constant prayer and repentance on thy part, thou wouldst overcome these ways tending to do thee evil. Margaret, cannot thou not see what is for thy good? Give me mine answer tonight!"

He came toward her with outstretched hands. "Say, Josiah, I will wed with thee."

Margaret, who had grown very white, drew away from him hastily, as if in horror of him, opened her mouth to shriek out her refusal, then suddenly with a strong effort composed herself and, giving her shoulders a little shrug, leaned back against the tree, regarding her companion with a half smile of contempt and derision.

"My good cousin," she commenced calmly, "since my return among my kinsfolk, where of a truth I expected warm greetings and loving attentions, with the exception of sweet Hetty I have received naught but unpleasant correction, constant criticism, unkind fault finding and rude interference with my mode of dress and manner of living. I have borne it all with patience, possibly indifference, attributing it to thine ignorance and the narrowness of thy living here. 'Tis true my ways are not thy ways. Forsooth, I would change them if they were, so in-supportable are thine to me, for I have ever been taught by the good and loving aunt who raised me that kind words and civil were much to be preferred to harsh criticism and cruel prejudice, and that fair words and good manners were what distinguished a gentleman from the boor. Again I say and in conclusion," she unannounced, with an air of finality, "if thou likest not my ways, I hold thine in abhorrence."

Josiah's thin lips moved. "Mine answer, Margaret Mayland," he interposed harshly, unable longer to endure the suspense; "cease thy woman's palaver and say me yea or nay."

"Thine answer?" She laughed a light laugh of contempt. "Here it is. I say it plainly so that thou'lt understand it and so I never cease thine importunities. Josiah Tanniston, I will not marry thee. Rather would I throw my body over the edge of yonder precipice and let the carrion feed on it. Now let me go my way!"

CHAPTER IX.

A COLOR, ashen gray, spread over Tanniston's face, white foam came on his lips, and, removing his hat, he mopped his forehead with his handkerchief. For the moment he was stunned with disappointment and anger, so much so that he did not appear to hear Margaret's second imperative command to give way to her, and stood looking at her dumbly. A woman to scorn him! Since Tanniston's majority in all, the counsels of the village his voice had ever been heard the loudest, carrying conviction with it. The people loved him; he was a leader, and in his own family the women obeyed his sternest orders without question or even hesitation. In consequence as he had commanded all about him for so many years he knew no other way of attaining his desires, so he thought now to conquer this woman, the first to rise in his path to block it, by his usual harsh methods of procedure.

"Before I leave this place tonight thou'lt unsay those words or I shall force them from thee!" he said in a choked voice, endeavoring to suppress his passion. Margaret laughed scornfully. "Force!" she exclaimed, lifting her skirts preparatory to moving away in the opposite direction. "Thou'lt established a poor rule to win a woman, good cousin."

She stood before him, maddening in her fearlessness, her contempt of him and her beauty. With his heart full of baffled hope and despair at seeing failure close at hand, to control his desire to spring upon her and by sheer physical strength compel her to promise to marry him he dug his nails into his clenched hands until he almost forced the blood.

Not understanding his strong and passionate nature or indifferent to his suffering, Margaret continued lightly: "Thou'lt ever been so generous with thine advice to me, Josiah, that before I go I'll give thee, forsooth, some small counsel in return. Learn, then, that, while force may be successful in driving men and animals, fair words, a galant bearing and loving attentions are shafts that sooner reach a woman's heart."

She moved away.

Josiah sprang toward her, laying a strong, detaining hand on her arm.

"Stay!" he exclaimed. "I would speak further. Dost thou think I heed thy foolish counsel? 'Tis true thou know, cousin, that God made woman to serve man, to recognize his better judgment in thankfulness and to bow her head in submission to his will. An thou hast thy way, Margaret, the world would be ruled by distaffs, an' all would come to ruin."

In the dull hopelessness that took possession of him at the sight of the detestation now openly expressed on her pale face his voice grew less harsh and his manner slightly entreating as he said, "Mayhap my ways are not so soft and squishy as those of the wicked worldly men, at heart blackguards, that thou hast met abroad, but thou would find me true, Margaret, and just, and under my direction thou would soon see the value of my ways and follow the good example I would ever seek to set for thee."

"I want none of thee nor thine examples," Margaret cried angrily. "And thou must cease thy persecutions. Know now for once and for all that I much dislike thee, that I loathe and hate thee, and that I hope our paths will never cross again!"

"An' thou hast no gratitude, woman, for my service on thine estate, for its present value on account of mine endeavors?"

"Thou hast had the yearly stipend that thou didst agree was sufficient," she replied. "Now an' for the last time, let me pass."

Seeing the expression of strength and resolution on her face and her manner so disdainful of him, Josiah sickened as a realization of his absolute inability to control this woman came over him. Almost crazed with despair, he spoke furiously, hardly knowing what he said.

"Hear me once more, an' then thou canst go the downward path thou hast chosen unmolested. The honest purpose of an upright man is as a stench in the nostrils because, wanting, thou lovest the wicked ways of thy French lover!"

Her blue eyes grew black, then fairly blazed. "Take care!" she said.

Josiah, unheeding, went on sneeringly, all the pent up hatred and jealousy in his heart coming out of his white lips in taunting phrases.

"Thy French lover, whose sweet enticing ways and gallant bearing thou doth so much admire—be that was to follow thee anon, to press his suit, wed thee an' live restfully on thine estate, spending thy gold for his pleasures until he died—why comest he not? Whose arms latrine about him, keeping him away?"

"I warn thee to take care!" Margaret cried in deep anger.

"Where is thy trumpet lover? Soft hearted fool! Dost thou hee'er fared forth from Lunnun up these hills to see thee once his eyes fell on the beauty of the maids of that gay city? It angers me to see thee, my cousin, standing there a deceived woman, defending to an honest man the name of a poltroon, a blackguard and a libertine!"

With a quick motion she raised her hand and gave him a stinging slap across the face. He looked at her for an instant, not comprehending what had happened, with open mouth and staring eyes. Then as a realization of what she had done swept over him blood so angry drew to his head that it maddened him. Springing toward her, he caught her in his arms in a close embrace.

"Thou'lt kiss me where thou struck me," he cried with wild passion, "or else I'll kill thee!"

She rocked and swayed in his embrace.

"Josiah, I loathe thee! Let me go!"

"Then," he said, with gloating in his voice, "if e'er thy gallant courtier lover happen doth give thee thought enough to ride this way I'll make my boasts on thee! So kiss me, woman, if not for love then for thy life!"

She felt his hot breath on her cheek, saw relentless determination in the steady eyes above her, and, desperately trying to free an arm, felt herself enclosed as in a vise of iron.

"Godfrey!" she called, now greatly frightened.

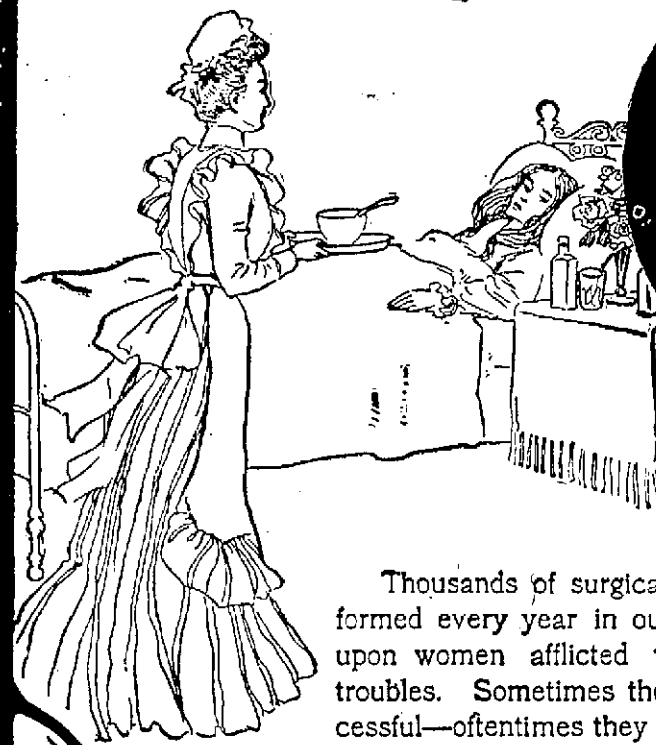

"Aye, call him! He'll come anon when he doth grow a-weary of the maids in Lunnun," he panted sneeringly.

The Hospital

Thankful are They Who Escape The Surgeon's Knife

Thousands of surgical operations are performed every year in our great city hospitals upon women afflicted with serious female troubles. Sometimes the operations are successful—oftentimes they are not.

It is safe to say that certainly nine out of ten operations for female troubles might have been wholly avoided.

The most valuable tonic and re-builder of the female organism, the medicine with a record of thousands of cases literally snatched from the operating table, is

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Do not consent to an operation which may mean death until after you have given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial. Note what it did for Mrs. Paul Oliver, whose letter follows:

DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was suffering from pains in my side and womb. The doctors said to get well I must have an operation performed, but I would not consent to that.

I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and sent for a bottle; the first dose did me good, and after taking the first bottle I could sleep all right and I did not have those pains around my womb which I had all the time before. Now I can ride ten miles in a carriage, my color has returned, and I am full of life. I owe all this to the Vegetable Compound. It has also done wonders for my thirteen-year-old daughter. I will never cease to praise it and recommend it to my friends.

MRS. PAUL OLIVER, St. Martinsville, La.

Thousands of women, residing in every city and town in the United States, bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It cures female ills and creates radiant, buoyant female health. For your own sake try it.

Nervous Headache

The Cause of Much Suffering to Women is Permanently Cured When the System is Built Up by

DR. A. W. CHASE'S NERVE PILLS.

When the head aches hard and throbs; when the neck and eyes grow stiff; the face flushes or grows deadly white; when any excitement or over effort brings on an attack of nervous headache so severe that it leaves you weak, tremble, shaky and utterly worthless for days, it is a certain indication that the nervous system is shattered—that resistive power is gone—that you need a medicine that will rebuild and re-supply the lost nerve force, that will so strengthen you that you can resist and overcome these terrible seizures. Such a medicine is Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills, a medicine that does not relieve but goes to the root of the trouble and positively cures.

Mrs. John Fall of Fourth St., Toronto, O., says: "I like Dr. A. W. Chase's Nerve Pills because they cured my nervous headache—these headaches used to play me out and leave me weak and nervous, the pain being so severe. My eyes used to get stiff and sore during the attack and the neck so stiff I could hardly turn it. The Nerve Pills, however, proved to be just what I needed and cured the attack in a hurry. As a result I feel steady in nerves, physically strong and vigorous and in every way sound and well. This makes me feel I can't speak too highly of the medicine." 50 cents a box at dealers or Dr. A. Home Health Club

By DAVID H. REEDER, Ph. D., M. D.
La Porte, Ind.

SORE THROAT.

There are a number of conditions which may be classed as sore throat; some of them very slight and others of grave importance. A common cold is the chief source of most throat troubles, and all the causes which result in "catching cold" may result in sore throat. These troubles usually prevail in cold and damp weather, when the chilling of the surface of the body drives the blood inward upon the internal structures, along with the excreta which should naturally be thrown off through the skin.

Some persons cannot have their feet become the least cold or damp without getting a sore throat. Immediately a raw feeling is experienced in the throat, and unless the feet are warmed very quickly a case of sore throat will develop. No matter what is the direct character of the disturbance in the throat, whether it is a germ of something else, it is certain that by taking proper precautions and keeping the system in good condition sore throat may always be avoided.

Avoid chilling the surface and getting the feet wet; keep the bowels open, eat nothing that interferes with the digestion, and take plenty of outdoor exercise, and sore throat will seldom occur. While essentially all sore throats are alike, still there are many varieties known under different names. For convenience these will be mentioned with their various characteristics.

First, there is a form of sore throat that consists of the structures becoming relaxed to such an extent that the little palate falls low down in the throat and touches the roof of the tongue. This may be readily seen by pressing upon the tongue with the flat end of a spoon. Sometimes the palate will be away down in the throat, or it may be found resting upon the tongue. This causes irritation and a constant tickling in the throat, and a feeling as though there was a foreign substance present; a miserable little hacking cough is usually provoked, and the voice is often somewhat changed. Usually these disagreeable symptoms last but a short time, but occasionally they may continue for a week or more, and if neglected the irritation may involve the greater structures, and result seriously. Again, the tickling cough may continue so long that coughing will prove exhausting.

There is no necessity for falling of the palate to continue more than a very short time. The quickest way to overcome the trouble is to put the feet in hot water and then place about the neck a cloth wrung out of cold water and cover all with a dry cloth. This should be continued until relief comes, changing the cold clothes every few minutes. Some persons advantageously touch the soft palate with powdered wild cherry bark or powdered witch hazel. There is no objection to doing this. But it does not remove the cause of the trouble; while the other method, of cold compresses about the neck, will act more quickly and completely cure the difficulty.

Sometimes a sore throat will start in with chilliness, headache, flushed face and some general fever. In the throat itself there may be feelings of rawness and soreness, and perhaps actual pain, swallowing is unpleasant and all the symptoms grow worse at night. The trouble may extend downward in the windpipe, and involve the vocal cords, causing hoarseness and even difficulty in breathing. In some cases a white-yellow secretion appears in little patches over the throat and tonsils, which is by many mistaken for diphtheria. But these little patches lie upon the surface, and are easily removed, in which particular they differ from diphtheria.

To cure such a sore throat, the cold, wet compresses above mentioned are usually sufficient. But if there is a general fever following chilliness, then the hot blanket rubbing should be employed, wrapping the whole body in a blanket wrung out of hot water, and frequently pouring over it additional hot water, while rubbing the body thoroughly with it. This should also be done, when there is hoarseness and cough accompanying the sore throat.

It is far more common to meet the chronic sore throat than to meet the acute forms. Such troubles exist in a variety of degrees and forms, and are dependent upon a variety of causes. As in acute sore throat the vocal organs are liable to be involved at the same time, and thus to cause marked change in the voice and prove a great annoyance. In simple cases, the back of the throat is somewhat dull-red in patches, and here and there the little veins may be seen to be swollen, interspersed with pale portions of the membranes. It is usual to find the throat swollen and the membranes thickened and rough-looking. Often they are red and dry, and look drawn and shining. In some cases there will be a sticky secretion in the throat, which may become yellow or even dry into crusts. Such secretions show the amount of effete materials present which should have passed off through other channels. The sensations experienced with these chronic throat difficulties are very annoying and sometimes continue persistently, usually growing worse in cold weather. Spitting and hacking and coughing are provoked by an almost constant tickling in the throat. Sometimes there is soreness and pain, and the voice may be husky and in bad cases almost lost at times. When there is nasal catarrh associated with the sore throat, the voice will have a peculiar nasal sound. To persons afflicted with chronic sore throat, let me say that the stomach and bowels must be promptly attended to before recovery can be hoped for. Food must be plain, for the system is already overburdened, and rich food will only increase the difficulty. Nevertheless, the diet must be nourishing, for strength must be built up. Omit spices and highly seasoned foods. Take plenty of outdoor exercise and let the exercise be methodical even if gymnastics must be resorted to. This will relieve the nervous system and restore the balance to the vital forces. Do not use the voice more than is absolutely necessary. Muffling the throat will make it tender, while gradually inuring the throat to cold weather will be beneficial. One of the most important steps in treatment is to keep the skin active, so as to use it as a means of carrying off the extra secretions thrown upon the inner surfaces. Frequent baths are desirable, followed by thorough rubbing. Hot blanket rubbing, described above, will be useful if the surface or hands and feet are disposed to become cold, but either warm baths or the hot blanket rubbing must be followed by a dash of cold water, or a thorough rubbing with olive oil or vaseline in order to avoid taking more cold through the relaxed skin, frequently placing about the throat cold cloths wrung out of cold water. If the voice is affected and there is a sense of constriction or "stuffed-up" feeling in the upper part of the chest, it is best to place the cold application over that part.

CLUB NOTES.

I have had a great many requests for a soft soap, for the scalp, similar to the olive oil and polish soap described in my lecture on how to cure falling hair. Many have even sent money and asked me to make or buy the soap and send it to them.

Of course, I return the money, as I have not the time for such work as making it and the expense of sending such small quantities would be almost as much as the cost of the soap.

I must help you all out of the difficulty, however, and so I will tell you how you can easily make it yourselves.

Take a cake of white castile soap, break into small pieces and add to a pint of soft water. Let it simmer until melted and add a cup of almond meal, a few drops of glycerine and tincture of benzoin. A soft cream should be the result and one excellent for the complexion, as well as for the hair. Use it freely as directed in the lecture on falling hair.

Oregon.—Dr. David H. Reeder, LaPorte, Ind.—Dear Doctor: Some time ago I tried the Home Health Club method for removing tape worm. I took it according to directions given in the paper, but it did me no good. Therefore I have come to the conclusion that there must have been something else the matter with me. I was also much troubled with constipation, for which I have found a simple home remedy that has helped me and am not bothered that way any more. The simple remedy is common bran and good cream before meals. I use four or five teaspoonfuls of bran twice a day.

Yours truly,
W. W.

The use of bran for constipation has frequently been used and is, for a time at least, usually quite effective, but the trouble is that it gives relief by reason of the hard, woody particles of the coarse bran, irritating the mucous lining of the intestines and thereby causing increased peristaltic action. After a time, however, the intestines are liable to either become irritated and inflamed or to become hardened to the irritation and the constipation will then get worse than it was before. Therefore this method should not be used very long, nor too frequently.

Rosemond.—Dr. David H. Reeder, LaPorte, Ind.—Dear Sir: I am in my eightieth year and have had soft corns between my toes most of the time. I tried every remedy I could hear of and nearly everybody I met had one which was better than the other, but none of them availed until I saw recommended in your columns the placing of white tissue paper in two or three folds between your toes and that did the work. Not a moment's pain have I had since. I feel now as though I might live 100 years. Enclosed find stamped envelope in which please send me formula for making compound gentian syrup, as a remedy for kidneys, stomach and constipation, as I am troubled in that direction.

I thank you for your kind words of encouragement. I have no doubt but what it will help others to overcome the same difficulty. A great many people may read the instructions, such as I gave for curing soft corns, and think they will try it, but do not. Compound gentian syrup is made as follows: Take one ounce each of gentian, ginger and wahoo, and two ounces each of golden-seal, boneseal and dwarf elder and a little orange peel and coriander seeds, and make into a quart of syrup. This compound is one that may be relied upon whenever a bitter tonic is needed. Dose, two teaspoonfuls before meals. I trust you may fulfill your ambition to live 100 years.

Advancement in Siam.

The Siamese capital is the terminus of four lines of railway. It has a fine service of electric trains and is well lit by electricity. It also possesses one of the finest race courses in the East and has many clubs, fine hotels, several banks, good hospitals, etc.

A MECHANICAL MARVEL.

Thermit a Powerful Agent in the Working of Metals in Great Machine Shops.

Recent demonstrations by Prof. Hans Goldschmidt, of Essen, Germany, of the remarkable powers of thermit in its application to engineering and metallurgy, open up many new possibilities in the fusing of metals. The heat generated by burning a compound of powdered aluminum and sesquioxide of iron, which is fired by a bit of magnesium tape, is so intense it can only be estimated, as no pyrometer could measure the temperature. Most notable, however, is the concentration of the applied heat. The fused combination burns a hole through an iron plate of any thickness without heating the plate except at the point of perforation. This new chemical marvel promises to prove of especial utility in electric railway construction because of the rapidity of its operation and the fact that the unions in joining rails are as good as the body of the rails, making the process less expensive than the adequate bonding of rails now employed. The fact that no sensible heat is radiated also makes thermit of value in such difficult operations as mending broken shafts on ocean liners, drivers on locomotives, and parts on other machinery where its removal for welding is not desirable. The intense concentration of heat was shown by the demonstrator, who immediately after pouring from the ladle a mixture of fused iron and corundum took the vessel in his naked hands and turned its glowing mouth to the audience to show the intense incandescence of its interior.

Why It Was.

An angry woman walked into a grocer's shop in an Ayrshire village and banged a piece of yellow substance on the counter.

"This," she said, "is the soap that does the washin' o' itself; the soap that makes every washin' day a kin' o' glorified feast; the soap that gets a' the linen white as snow an' as sweet as a hazelnut, and let's the delighted housewife play wi' the children; an' here I've been scrubbin' three mortals hours wi' that lump an' got nea mair lather oot o' it than I could get oot o' a brick."

"I beg your pardon," said the grocer, calmly, "but that isn't soap. Your little boy was here yesterday for half a pound of cheese and half a pound of soap. That's the cheese."

"The cheese!" exclaimed the woman. "Then that accounts for the other thing."

"What other thing?"
"I lay awa'k the hale nicht, winner-in' whit made the Welsh rabbit we had fur oor supper taste sae queer."—Smith's Weekly.

HOW TO-OUTFIT FOR CAMP

Various Articles Which Will Be Found Convenient and Useful in Outing.

Before starting on the trip, make bags for everything. Make them with draw strings and of different material to suit the various articles. Advise Arnold Bartlett Parker, in Recreation. Oil silk for your toothbrush, cotton flannel for your fish reels and bags of different colored cloth for the other objects. Make each bag distinctive so that you can readily identify its contents. In packing my duffle into camp I use a pair of war bags made by a western concern. They can be used as valises on board train or ship, can be strapped to a mule's back, or made into a knapsack. They are thoroughly waterproof and hold nearly as much as a steamer trunk. Another important item in my outfit is a light rubber pouch, which serves many purposes and occupies small space in the bag. Bags should be obtained for the transportation of provisions and a careful review of any of the catalogues issued by the large outfitting people will reveal a varied assortment from which to select.

Every member of a camping party should be supplied with a good knife, a pocket compass, a folding drinking cup, and a waterproof matchbox. Other important adjuncts of the sportsman's kit are wire nails, canvas war pails, an ax and several lanterns, preferably those made of aluminum folding in a small space.

NEW YORK'S ODD CORNERS

Quaint Survivals of Other Days That Are But Seldom Noticed by People Now.

Travelers like to visit the oddly-named little streets of old London Town that they may talk of them to their intimates, but few of those who pry into the corners of foreign cities know of the quaint survivals of other days in the very heart of the new world metropolis. Of Flat and Barrack Hill, Tin Pot Alley, Edgar Street and Petticoat Lane in the midst of the financial district of New York, writes Charles Hemstreet, in Four-Track News.

Standing at 57 Broadway one looks down a steep and narrow street that was the joy of the small boys of a century and a half ago, for then this spot was known as Flat and Barrack Hill, and down the slope in winter time the lads and lassies coasted, speeding on into Garden street, as the rude road was known after it crossed Broad street. Now, under the more significant name of Exchange place, this street wriggles between great sky-scrapers, and from Broadway one can see the edge of the largest office building in the world, the Broad exchange, on the southeast corner of Broad street and Exchange place.

SHREDDED PATIENCE...

Is a Common Ailment.

Is Your Patience Worn to Shreds

By living in a house which always needs repairs, but whose owner thinks that promises should satisfy you?

By a servant who raises your living expenses and lowers your living comforts;

By an employe who tries harder to "work you" than to work for you;

By a partner who shares the profits but shirks the pains;

By an exorbitant rent for office or store or shop;

By a book-keeper who is merely "quick at figures" but very slow to understand what they are all about;

By a lack of business capital?

An Intelligent Want advertising Campaign, costing hardly more than a week's pocket money, will correct all of these things, and put your nerves in proper condition again.

TRANSMITTED ELECTRICITY

Mining Industry the One Most Benefited Through Its Application as Motive Power.

Scientific readers in general are familiar with the remarkable development during the last few years of power transmission by means of high voltage alternating currents. But perhaps only the traveled few, says the Chicago Tribune, realize the extent to which this method is being put to practical use, especially in the factories of this country. In sections where fuel is scarce and correspondingly expensive industries which otherwise would be prohibited can be carried on profitably by the use of power thus transmitted for long distances. In many places in the west wires conveying electric power from the power house to a point far up in the mountains have transported the eight-horse freight outfit with which fuel formerly was tediously transported.

Mining is the industry chiefly benefited through this application of electricity as a motive power, primarily because by reason of its cheapness it permits the treatment of ores of the lower grades, which, using the costly steam power, it would be impossible to handle profitably.

The ease with which electric motive power may be conveyed through cables into the most inaccessible parts of mines is another feature that recommends it to the mine owners of the west.

One main line of power transmission near Silver City, Idaho, is 27 miles long from the dam where the power is generated to the distribution point. The line consists of No. 4 bare copper cables strung on cedar posts 30 feet high. The insulators supporting these wires are of glass, 32 inches long, and tested to 40,000 volts.
